

Santorini Greece- Needle Felt Picture Supply List and Pattern

Travel Postcards Captured in Felt
Join us for a little journey - a daydream vacation to Santorini, Greece

During this unique time when so many of us are unable to travel or even leave our homes, we thought it a perfect time to "virtually" visit some wonderful places and create staycation postcards to keep as fond memories.

Let us take a stroll in the village of Oia in Santorini, Greece. The sky is a brilliant blue, the ocean looks deep and inviting, the white stone walls serve as a brilliant backdrop to the colorful doors and window shutters. Let us sit and have a coffee, then visit the windmill, see a few churches, walk along the stone paths and shop for souvenirs.

We can have lunch on a terrace, enjoying the salty breeze, looking out at the islands. You can show me the wonderful treasures you bought today, and we will drink lemonade as we make plans for an afternoon swim, followed by a dinner party with my friends Nikos and Roubini. Nikos is in the music business, so bring your dancing shoes as there will surely be musicians there to entertain us.

This image is an artistic version of an original photograph.
We have "softened" the sharpness to create a more painterly feel.

This is the reverse image. If using the iron-on transfer pen, trace over the image that is the "reverse" of the image you wish to felt.

Make sure the pen has ink flowing by pressing the tip a few times on a separate sheet of paper. Print out the image you wish to trace on regular paper.
Trace over the lines you wish to have as guides.

Place your image face down on your felt or fabric. *If your fabric is thick wrinkled, or if using felt, iron the fabric just before making the transfer.

Using a dry iron on the hottest setting, place the iron on the back of the image, and hold in place for 20seconds until you have covered the entire image.

The lines you traced should now be visible from the back of the paper.
You can gently peel back a corner to check the transfer.

*The most common error is to make your lines too thin. Please also note, light colored pens will not show up on dark fabrics.
You can usually get 2-3 decent transfers from one tracing.
